

Theory of Change: Health and Care Project

Impact

Third sector organisations and volunteers are trusted and valued

WCVA outcomes

All sectors collaborate more for shared ambitions

Voluntary organisations lead positive change

Our democracy better supports participation by voluntary organisations

More diverse resources strengthen delivery

Health and Care Project outcomes

The third sector influences early, and continuous dialogue with health and care partners for more person-centred outcomes

There is stronger third sector collaboration and collective voice

The third sector is engaged and resourced to participate in strategic structures

Statutory health and care organisations value, trust and respect the contribution of the third sector and volunteering to health and care outcomes

Volunteering and third sector organisations are resourced to make meaningful contributions for people.

Project activities will Influence, Enable and Connect through network facilitation, learning and events, promotion, research and evidence, and convening strategic partners. This is how WCVA will be a catalyst for positive change.

Being a critical friend that drives continuous improvement to strengthen policy and practice.

Being an advocate for the sustainable investment in the third sector that builds capacity and drives demand.

Enabling the third sector to evidence their individual and collective value effectively and strategically plan accordingly.

Connecting third sector organisations to each other and with the health and care system, focusing on long-term, learning and supporting relationships of mutual benefit.
